

Non-Union Employee's Social Media Speech May Be Protected by the National Labor Relations Act

03.15.13

As more and more social media websites like Facebook strive to hit one billion active users, employers will continue to update their internal social media policies and seek new ways to monitor and discourage their employees from posting disparaging online remarks about their company and other employees. Employers need to be aware of a recent...

Continue Reading