

Cautionary Note for Private Company Owners: Third Party Investors Can Create Thorny Problems

12.23.19

Like fish need water in which to swim, private company owners need to secure capital on an almost continuous basis. Capital is necessary to develop the company's products and services, to retain top talent and to market and promote the business. But securing capital from outside investors can cause headaches for company founders when conflicts...