

Court Holds That Allegations Related To A Trustee's Filing Of Suit Did Fall Under The Protection Of The Texas Citizens Participation Act, That A Trustee's Actions To Modify Administrative Terms Did Not Trigger An In Terrorem Clause, But That Other Actions Unrelated To Suit Filings Were Not Protected From The Act

01.26.21

In Marshall v. Marshall, a son, who was a trust beneficiary, sued his mother and brother alleging breaches of fiduciary duty and sought a declaratory judgment that they violated an in terrorem clause of the will.
