

Navigating “Down Round” Financings

09.23.20

After a decade of steadily rising valuations, the coronavirus pandemic has created downward valuation pressure on startup and emerging growth companies. Companies that need to raise capital in the current environment may find themselves able to do so only at substantially diminished valuations, often known as “down rounds.” This webinar will focus on issues particular to down round financings, including transaction structuring, impacts on founders and existing investors and employees, and director and officer fiduciary duty considerations.
